

DINING PARLOR: KEIA MCSWAIN

When a wave of creativity hits me, I try to design in a way that speaks to emotions on all levels, both creatively and unapologetically. When I built this room, I wanted to curate a space that mirrored my own emotions. We didn't hone any particular style, but maintained a mixture of them. This space transcends the thought of one style preference. It unifies them all while evoking a serene vibe.

We incorporated Mitchell Black's Kingwood mural on the ceilings and walls. Green is a renewal color and we chose Benjamin Moore's Avocado green for the trim and baseboards. It was the perfect way to implement "renewal". We chose brass as a fresh and modern touch, while infusing other pieces with a mod vintage and eclectic feel.
